

Episode 56Vj, June 28, 2024. Joe Biden brought up military burn pit emissions last night. I love Joe Biden. He brought up the subject of deadly emissions from military burn pits, and by God, the legislation was passed to provide help to veteran soldiers who were hurt by military burn pits. It brought the subject of harmful and deadly emissions from solid fuel burning to the public's attention and brought me a reason to discuss harmful emissions endured by near neighbors of indoor residential wood burners with military veterans themselves, and we listened to each other.

I love Joe Biden's administration. The focus of the landmark legislation, the Inflation Reduction Act was helping people, and by God, helping the planet at the same time! The solutions were laid out, and slowly but surely the solutions are becoming real. Heat Pumps that work down to 40 degrees below zero, which is essential in a cold climate like Wisconsin's, with rebates of up to $8,000 on a sliding income scale! This truly clean home heating solution was tailor made for solving the problem of being a near neighbor enduring air pollution from indoor residential wood burners!

I happened to come across California Governor Gavin Newsom's California State of the Union speech on the New York Times website on Tuesday, and I put it on my Facebook page because I liked it. And last night, after the debate, Gavin Newsom was the perfect surrogate for President Joe Biden. He is energetic and articulate and believes that the solutions that Joe Biden's administration has come up with and is implementing are what should have been articulated at greater length during the debate.

I love to go on and on, talking about solutions, and Gavin Newsom can do that! Joe Biden and his administration is our way out of our problems, and, in contrast, the United States' major lingering problem was on display last night at a podium next to Joe Biden's. We must fight the greed out there that subordinates human health and climate health, and promotes chaos and stupidity without solutions, apparently just so that one criminal can get out of jail free.
