2 New York City Marathon November 2 2025 Air Pollution Could Be Contributing to Your Slower Marathon Time The New York Times Excerpts Edited by RAWSEP for brevity and clarity and Relationship to Residents Against Wood Smoke Emission Particulates a 501C3 nonprofit organization AI Overview Yes air pollution can contribute to slower marathon times A study found that for every 1

microgram per cubic meter increase in fine particulate matter PM 2 point 5 the marathon times of men slowed by an average of 32 seconds and the marathon times of women slowed by 25 seconds This effect is particularly pronounced in faster runners suggesting that air quality is a significant performance factor even on moderately polluted days How air pollution affects running performance Physical impact Fine particulate matter PM 2 point 5 can get deep into the lungs enter the bloodstream and cause inflammation which negatively impacts performance Your Performance slowdown The slowdown is noticeable even at acceptable pollution levels and it adds up over the course of a marathon Greater impact on faster runners While air pollution affects all runners the slowdown is more pronounced for faster finishers Other pollutants Oxidants like carbon monoxide ozone and oxides of nitrogen as well as sulfur oxides can also impair performance and irritate the lungs How to mitigate the effects of air pollution Check the forecast Avoid exercising outdoors especially running long distances on days with high air quality alerts for example Code Red AQI Consider indoor options On poor air quality days consider moving your longer or faster workouts indoors

3 RFK Junior Lack of Knowledge of Medicine and Science Air Pollution What the Air You Breathe May Be Doing to Your Brain The New York Times Excerpts Edited by RAWSEP for brevity and clarity and Relationship to Residents Against Wood Smoke Emission Particulates a 501C3 nonprofit organization

Although air pollution has declined in the United States over two decades scientists are calling for still stronger policies to promote cleaner air People argue that air quality is expensive Doctor Lee said So is dementia care Trump however entered office again vowing to increase the extraction and use of fossil fuels and to block the transition to renewable energy His administration has rescinded tax incentives for solar installations and electric vehicles Doctor Balmes noted adding They are encouraging continuing to burn coal for power generation The administration has halted new offshore wind farms announced oil and gas drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska and moved to stop the California plan to transition to electric cars by 2035 The state has challenged that action in court If policy goes in the opposite direction with more air pollution that is a big health risk for older adults Doctor Wu said Last year under the Biden administration the Environmental Protection Agency set tougher annual standards for PM 2 point 5 noting that the available scientific evidence and technical information indicate that the current standards may not be adequate to protect public health and welfare as required by the Clean Air Act see in both his presidencies Trump can happily accept the neoliberal agenda when it means privatizing government agencies and commonly held assets He is enthusiastic about deregulation and handing the private sector all the freedom it needs to exploit workers and resources to boost profits But what the Trump America First agenda cannot live with is tariff free trade He also resists antitrust and anticorruption laws low budget deficits and the abolition of barriers to foreign investment that qualify as central tenets of the Washington consensus And Trump is not alone Since the 2008 financial crash most people have questioned the outcomes that flow from neoliberalism A group of renowned economists joined this debate with the idea of seeking a new consensus around ideas and gaining evidence of what works when thinking about how economies thrive and prosper in the 21st century The resulting book just published could prove to be a successor to the wish list drawn up in Washington 36 years ago It is a timely attempt to wrest back the economic agenda from the current chaos After a conference in London and the sponsorship of the London School of Economics it has quickly become known as the London consensus Not with the idea of reinventing some form of economic colonialism directed from the UK capital but because the best economists in the world gathered in London and most were associated at some point whether they were a former finance minister of Chile or Bank of England policymaker with the London School of Economics LSE It will not surprise anyone that the proposals are a long way from being described as Trumpian Philosophically the London consensus pursues aims that are entirely rejected by Trump and his followers One of the messages from the London consensus is that bettering oneself at the expense of others and thereby increasing inequality will not help young people to thrive Not even the children of middle income parents who have benefited from extensive support whether from private education private health or a deposit for a home surrounded by high walls will ultimately feel better if high rates of crime and corruption lurk beyond the garden gate That high levels of inequality hold back economic progress is empirically proven Another message relates to how we judge progress It rejects the emphasis on simply putting more money in the pockets of people as the main aim for a politician A higher income is relatively easy to measure using gross domestic product It is a single number that everyone knows is bad when it goes down The wellbeing of individuals and households is a much better guide to progress It is something Keir Starmer recognizes and it is why Wes Streeting has commissioned more mental health appointments and Peter Kyle the business secretary continues to advance the employment rights bill Mental health is a good measure to watch on the dashboard of indicators by which the London consensus would have us judge success First it is classless Everyone knows someone who is angry depressed or lonely and could do with at the very least some talking therapy Second all the evidence points to huge benefits from tackling these modern ills from better physical health and higher job participation rates to greater involvement in community affairs The US can avoid spending money in this area because it denies the victims of capitalism a ticket to ride leaving them to fester on the side of the road The Trump supporters may never read the evidence contained in the many chapters of the London Consensus There are discussions on how to achieve universal healthcare foster green and inclusive productivity growth and maintain sustainable government spending that would probably horrify them Hopefully US state governors and prime ministers across the world will ask their staff to read the book leading us away from the Washington consensus to a better place

AI Overview

Virginia became the data center capital due to a combination of its strategic location historical development of fiber optic networks from government and private investment strong infrastructure and business friendly environment with tax incentives Proximity to Washington DC a large and educated workforce and government and utility cooperation have also fueled its growth into the largest data center hub in the world Key factors for the Virginia data center dominance Infrastructure and location Early internet infrastructure The region was an early hub for the internet benefiting from government funding for its precursor and later from significant private investment in fiber optic networks by companies like AOL Strategic location the Northern Virginia location is ideal for connectivity to the East Coast and it is a safe area away from extreme weather events

Business and economic environment Tax incentives State and local governments have offered significant tax exemptions and incentives particularly for data centers that meet investment and job creation criteria

Business friendly policies Virginia has a history of being business friendly for technology companies supported by local governments working with state agencies to attract and support data center development Resources and workforce Abundant power The state has access to abundant and affordable electric power with a robust energy infrastructure that includes a growing renewable energy component Talented workforce Its proximity to Washington DC and a high concentration of educated residents have provided a skilled workforce for the tech sector
