Birds accompanied by wood smoke fly away
As a torment to the beautiful birds you spy
On a nature walk end it all with a bird's cry
Away! Away! the birds will fly. Set things awry
Because you are allowed at cooler temperatures
To top off your up to now natural adventures
With a camp fire as if you are on military bivouac
Instead of stopping to share a hot thermos or snack
You need to gather a pile of wood or chop some down
And set it ablaze in order to stage a showdown
With air that has been clean up to now
You are a human and the birds must bow down
Their wings feel heavy in the polluted air
Their instincts are better than ours
Has a bird ever set a forest ablaze
Their errors do not extend that way
They may choose to alight near you
Do not make them fear you
Be kind to our feathered friends
Keep your pyromania to yourself
