

“Dancing with you in the aisle of a train
We are alone, we sing our own refrain
I have to catch my breath and remember
What do I get a kick out of? What sends me?
I better straighten up and fly right and settle down
I need to look back on my life and how it sounds
To continue to try, get up again and again
When I am kicked to the curb, or love in vain
I look out to the street and see the face of a friend
Is what I am doing now, what I really intend?
I’m traveling again and can’t avoid some pain
I can face it, but why all these drops of rain?”
“I want to feel real love and all that goes with it
I want to bring love to others and not miss it
I care about you all and I want to show it
Does caring for you count, without losing my heart?
I just want a heat pump with superficial traits
Once I have a heat pump we can both just skate
Over any problems that come up in our new life
And believe me that our lives will be rife
With complications you cannot imagine
Once we finish this dance and visit green mansions.”
“Dancing with you in the aisle of a train
We are alone, we sing our own refrain
I have to catch my breath and remember
What do I get a kick out of? What sends me?
I better straighten up and fly right and settle down
I need to look back on my life and how it sounds
To continue to try, get up again and again
When I am kicked to the curb, or love in vain
I look out to the street and see the face of a friend
Is what I am doing now, what I really intend?
I’m traveling again and can’t avoid some pain
I can face it, but why all these drops of rain?”
“I want to feel real love and all that goes with it
I want to bring love to others and not miss it
I care about you all and I want to show it
Does caring for you count, without losing my heart?
I just want a heat pump with superficial traits
Once I have a heat pump we can both just skate
Over any problems that come up in our new life
And believe me that our lives will be rife
With complications you cannot imagine
Once we finish this dance and visit green mansions.”